The Levantine Foundation

Press Release

Opening of the Deir al-Surian Library and Conservation Centre, Wadi el Natrun, Egypt

On Sunday 19 May, 2013, the Monastery of the Syrians (referred to thereafter as Deir al-Surian) will open its doors to guests attending the opening of the new state-of-the-art library. The event will be held under the patronage of His Holiness Pope Tawadros II, Pope of Alexandria and Patriarch of the See of Saint Mark; His Grace Bishop Mattaos, Abbot of Deir al-Surian; and The Levantine Foundation.

The new library, partially funded by the Foundation, has been built within the tenth century walls of the sixth century Coptic monastery to house the priceless collection of ancient Christian Coptic, Syriac, Ethiopic, and Arabic manuscripts, many of which date back to the fifth, sixth, and seventh centuries A.D. The Levantine Foundation is strongly committed to the preservation and recording of these important manuscripts.

The purpose-built library will provide world class storage for the collection and facilities for all aspects of book conservation, including education and training which will enable unrivalled state-of-the-art care for the library's precious collection. The building is equipped with an advanced temperature and humidity control system for long term preservation, a conservation laboratory, and public access areas such as reading rooms for visiting scholars. Biannual conservation field campaigns organised by The Levantine Foundation will give British, European, and Egyptian conservators unique professional development opportunities to acquire broader capability and 'extended professionalism' characterised by independent judgment, involvement in a community of practice, and the demonstration of practical or intellectual leadership.

Elizabeth Sobczynski, founder and CEO of The Levantine Foundation comments on the new library:

This is the most exciting moment since the inception of the organisation in 2002. For the past ten years it has been my dream to safely house this unique collection, to ensure its survival for future generations, and with modern technology, make it accessible to the world of scholarship. Now that my dream has been fulfilled, I look forward to working with the collection and training Egyptian conservators on how to best preserve their cultural heritage for future generations.

The library will be opened by His Holiness Pope Tawadros II, and the event will be attended by His Grace Bishop Mattaos; Sir Derek Plumbly, President of The Levantine Foundation; CEO

Elizabeth Sobczynski; Dr Khalil Nougaim, Executive Director of The Levantine Foundation in Egypt; many distinguished heads of the Coptic Orthodox Church, and other eminent guests.
